

We're British, Innit: An Irreverent A to Z of All Things British

By Iain Aitch

HarperCollins Publishers. Paperback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, We're British, Innit: An Irreverent A to Z of All Things British, Iain Aitch, Forget the Government's Citizenship Test - this is the real measure of Britishness. With a wealth of brand-new material that will bring a smile of recognition to even the stiffest of upper lips, Iain Aitch brings us even more explorations of innate Britishness. Continuing in the snappy A-Z format, Iain Aitch brings us all things uniquely British, whether it's our love of fish and chips, our high regard for James Bond or the red telephone box, everything you've ever regarded as being inimitably British is contained within these pages. Test your knowledge of Britain and what it means to be British by answering the multiple choice questions at the end of the book. What kind of peas are used to make mushy peas? What were the last words of Admiral Lord Nelson? What exactly is Readers' Wives? Were you paying attention? With more style than Jarvis Cocker's moves and more pomp than Elgar's masterpiece, this is a celebration of all that is truly glorious about good old Blighty. A book for the entire British population - Northerner, Southerner,...

We're all British, innit? Immigrants? Asylum seekers? You've seen nothing until you've been to London's East End. But, as Tarquin Hall found while living there, the difference between immigrants and the British is not what it seems. Sunday April 17 2005, 1.00am, The Sunday Times. Only the separate bathroom lived up to its description. It had been suspended from the back of the building in contravention of all planning regulations by a man known locally as Rafik the Builder. Measuring 4ft by 5ft, it was barely large enough to house a toilet and a shower. In order to wash, you had first to step over the toilet, avoiding two plastic buckets positioned on the floor to capture raindrops from cracks in the ceiling. There was no basin and I noticed that the previous tenants had made do.
