Buy used With meticulous detail, James Randi takes you through the nonsense that is the world of psychics, faith healers, and other delusional weird, wonderful, and downright mendacious fantasists. His vitriol is particularly aimed at the pseudo-scientists who with transparently faulty data (often deliberately so) make grand claims in support of fads, cults and spurious phenomena that most primary age children would see through as not a 'fair test'. Such matters as the psychic surgeons of the Philippines, ancient astronauts and searching for water with a forked stick are all studied critically. Dr. Isaac Asimov writes, in the introduction, that "Randi strikes back and when the pseudoscientists howl, he knows that he has hit the mark."
