Another Christmas Sermon Series angle you might consider as we enter into the holiday season, is leaning into common pop culture references that your guests can connect with and doing a Christmas Series themed by movies and/or music. Here are 10 you might want to consider for your church or youth group! 1. Christmas at the Movies. This four-week Christmas series looks at four songs from the book of Luke (Mary's, Zechariah's, the Angels', and Simeon's), explaining what each says about the story of Christmas. This is a unique Christmas Sermon Series that offers a look at the birth of Jesus told through four different voices and angles. 7. Joyful Noise. This four-week student series tells the Christmas story through a topical lens. A Christmas Sermon book. Read 13 reviews from the world's largest community for readers. This is a pre-1923 historical reproduction that was curated for ... A quick read, and a thought-provoking sermon. Perfectly pairs with a reading of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol, due to the message it bears how you are living your life truly matters. "It is not enough in life to not do wrong. You must do actual intended good." A quick read, and a thought-provoking sermon. By the time this paper appears, I shall have been talking for twelve months;[1] and it is thought I should take my leave in a formal and seasonable manner. Valedictory eloquence is rare, and death bed sayings have not often hit the mark of the occasion. Charles Second, wit and sceptic, a man whose life had been one long lesson in human incredulity, an easy going comrade, a manoeuvring king remembered and embodied all his wit and scepticism along with more than his usual good humour in the famous "I am afraid, gentlemen, I am an unconscionable time a dying."
