Drug addiction is also a relapsing disease. Relapse is the return to drug use after an attempt to stop. The path to drug addiction begins with the voluntary act of taking drugs. But over time, a person's ability to choose not to do so becomes compromised. Seeking and taking the drug becomes compulsive. This is mostly due to the effects of long-term drug exposure on brain function. Based on scientific research since the mid-1970s, the following key principles should form the basis of any effective treatment program: Addiction is a complex but treatable disease that affects brain function and behavior. No single treatment is right for everyone. People need to have quick access to treatment. Effective treatment addresses all of the patient's needs, not just his or her drug use. Certain drugs are classified as new molecular entities (NMEs) for purposes of FDA review. Many of these products contain active moieties that have not been approved by FDA previously, either as a single ingredient drug or as part of a combination product; these products frequently provide important new therapies for patients. Some drugs are characterized as NMEs for administrative purposes, but nonetheless contain active moieties that are closely related to active moieties in products that have previously been approved by FDA. Building of modern drug carrier is a new method which could be effectively applied in targeted anticancer therapy. The mechanism of drug delivery in classical and targeted therapy (the figure is based on [12, 199]). (a). (b). Applied ligand enabled effective uptake of anticancer system by HER2 receptor of breast cancer cells. The drug is characterized by a long time of circulation in blood without any side effects. Nanoparticles had higher loading capacity of doxorubicin comparing with liposomes.
