In A LIFE IN BOOKS, Mobley's autobiography/apologia is paired with a review of all 101 of his books. Each book is represented by its first-edition cover design and catalogue copy, and more than a third of his books are excerpted. Look at the covers, read the titles, and skip the rest. Warren Lehrer's "A Life in Books" is a totally unique book. The 101 books written (or co-written) by the narrator encompass a broad range of genres and artistic questions about what makes a "book"- something the "illuminated novel" itself exemplifies in a myriad of ways. In love with words, design and art, and the fusion of all, the book is full of surprises. Find the complete A Look at Life In book series listed in order. "Look into your book" means "I know your book exists and I will now go learn more about its existence, but I will probably not look at or read your actual book." "Look into" is most often used to mean "research" or "learn more about," but in a lazy sort of way. "I'll look into that" = "I won't ignore it, but I also won't try very hard to learn about it." "Look into your book" would not be given as an instruction meaning "go learn something about your book." This means I live (in a house, apartment or some place) alone. No one else lives with me. It can also mean I live there without help from others, but we usually assume it means alone. "By myself" describes how I live. If I remove "by" I end up with "I live myself." This would be a strange. Who lives? I live. I am currently alive.
