"Contemporary Continental Theology". Author: King, Martin Luther, Jr. In his book, Freedom in the Modern World, Maritain offers a rationalistic account of the origin of freedom. The world of freedom, he says, is not to be opposed to the world of nature, as in the Kantian philosophy; neither is it to be confused with it, as in the philosophy of Spinoza and Hegel; it is to be seen as grounded in the world of nature, but distinct from it. Concerning God, the crisis theologians are always true to their conviction that the infinite God is forever unknowable and indescribable. Even when we say we know him our knowledge is of an incomprehensible Reality. He is the Wholly Other. Contemporary continental theologians.
