This text provides a coherent, thematic account of social policy in the modern world. Taking a comparative perspective, it explores similarities and differences in the ways in which different countries approach social policy, both by looking at the broad characteristics of those policies and by examining variations in the ways in which key issues of social welfare are handled. The book is organised into three parts. The first part examines approaches to looking at social policy comparatively. The second examines individual policy areas, including social security, employment policy (in a chapter 206 A handbook of comparative social policy. post-war welfare states of the West. Its underlying assumptions are revealed and shown to be manifestly inapplicable to much of the less developed, the developing and the transitional worlds of the South and the East.Â In much of the developing world, economy-based exploitation relations are interwoven with other systems of inequality and domination. Third, the idea of livelihoods replaces that of labour markets.Â difference from the ideal modern capitalist model concerns the lack of a clear division between production and reproduction and the significance of "non-productive" activities, including investment in social networks. Fourth, political mobilization takes different forms. 10. Asset, Risk & Social Policy Modern social policies are now concerned with how social policies could enhance family and individual capacity to face both economic and non-economic family crises. Asset-building has been seen as vital life-long process to enhance such capacity. The focus of the lecture will be how government has succeeded or failed to use social policies to enhance such capacity-building. 11. Disasters and Social Policy Modern life is beset with natural disasters of a scale that commonly shattered families and communities within a short time. This often calls for emergency...Â Social policy in the modern world: A comparative text. Oxford: Blackwell publishing. Lee, J. and Chan, K-W. (Eds.)

Malden, MA: Blackwell. Kennett, Patricia (2004). The paper must be done individually and it must include a comparative piece on a social policy in Canada and a country in the EU. For example, if your presentation is about health care in France, the final paper will continue on that topic but it must also include a section on health care in Canada with a component of the paper dedicated to comparing and contrasting health care policy in France and Canada (or a province in Canada). In the final paper it is appropriate (desirable) to include the complexities and conundrums that were encountered in conducting comparative social policy research.
