A Jewish Memory Book: Nuremburg, 1349 By Eleazar ha-Levi © 2004. eleazar_halevi@yahoo.com 2004 KWHSS. Background. This paper analyzes the Memorbuch of Nurnburg, 1349, which lists the 560 victims, men, women, and children, (about one-fourth of the Jewish population of Nuremburg, Germany), who were burned alive in that city on December 5, 1349. They were killed in the belief that they had caused the Black Plague.1. Atrocities were committed in over 60 large and 150 small Jewish communities across Switzerland and Germany. Jews were killed in riots, by torture, or burnt at the stake. In the largest incident, August 24, 1349, some 10,000 Jews were massacred during riots in Mayence and Breslau, two of the largest communities. His grandkids, Lori and Jessica decide that they can keep his memory alive by baking a strudel, a strudel that has been prized in their Jewish family from generation to generation. But the most important ingredient in the recipe is to recite the story Grandpa told them when he made the strudel. Each part of the recipe preparation has its own dramatic family history story that has been passed on for generations. His latest book should establish him as one of its most important critics.Zakhor is historical thinking of a very high order - mature speculation based on massive scholarship." - New York Times Book Review. eISBN: 978-0-295-80383-8. Subjects: Sociology. In some sense, that preface is a classical essay on "Jewish History and Jewish Memory," the subtitle of Yosef Hayim Yerushalmi's eloquent and disturbing book. Zakhor, the title, is the verb used throughout the Hebrew Bible whenever Israel is admonished: "Remember!" Strauss, a touch more implicitly than the Bible, also admonished us to remember
