The chronology of St. Paul's career and St. Paul's writings is gradually attaining completeness and consistency of sequence and of form; alternatives are yielding one by one to closer scrutiny; the whole is falling into a natural unity, that corresponds to the successive intervals and phases of experience; and each new determination of the historical context - the circumstances, the sequence and the relationships of individual Epistles - brings with it a juster appreciation of the character, the methods, the intellectual and spiritual crises and developments of the man himself. Each Epistle becomes a live and glowing transcript of some formative experience, which often furnishes the clue to other phases of behaviour and passages of self-expression. The present Essay will deal with a single section only of St. Paul's activities; but it is that section which, standing at the climax of his missionary career, produced that group of Epistles, which all schools of critics are agreed in regarding as the most unquestioned, and in some respects the most...

Although the Christian cannot regard the Epistles contained in the New Testament as having quite the same importance as the Gospels which record the life and sayings of his Divine Master, he must regard them as having a profound significance. They deal with the creed and the conduct of the Church with an inspired insight which gives them an undying value, and they are marked by a personal affection which gives them an undying charm. They lend, too, a most powerful support to the historical evidence of the truth of Christianity. We have already noticed that the earliest Gospel was probably not ... For instance, the doctrine of the Atonement is more plainly expounded in the Epistles than in the Gospels. The First Epistle to the Corinthians (Ancient Greek: Ἡ ἐπιστολὴ τοῦ ἀποστόλου Παύλου πρὸς τοὺς Κορινθίους Α΄, usually referred to as First Corinthians or 1 Corinthians is a Pauline epistle of the New Testament of the Christian Bible. The epistle is attributed to Paul the Apostle and a co-author named Sosthenes, and is addressed to the Christian church in Corinth. Scholars believe that Sosthenes was the amanuensis who wrote down the text of the letter at Paul's direction. It addresses various issues that had arisen in the church at Corinth. Alternative Title: The Epistle of St. Paul the Apostle to the Corinthians. Letters of Paul to the Corinthians , also called Epistles of St. Paul the Apostle to the Corinthians, abbreviation Corinthians , either of two New Testament letters, or epistles , addressed by St. Paul the Apostle to the Christian community that he had founded at Corinth , Greece. To members of the community quarreling about the nature and distribution of spiritual gifts, Paul replies that jealousy among those working in the Spirit of God is as irrational as jealousy between the eye and the ear: both are essential to the well-being of the body as a whole. Epistles of Paul the apostle. To the Corinthians. By John Calvin. Translated from the original Nicene and Post-Nicene Fathers.
