RICHARD HENRY PRATT (1840-1924)

Richard Henry Pratt devoted his life to public service, beginning as a soldier in the Civil War and later fighting Indians on the frontier. It was on the frontier that Pratt came in contact with the American Indian and began developing the theories that were to guide him throughout his life.

It was Pratt's belief that the American Indian, although leading a savage and uncivilized life, was fully capable of being educated and absorbed into American society. Pratt gained support for this view when he commanded a group of seventy-two Indian prisoners at St. Augustine, Florida, in 1875. Through education and humane treatment, Pratt believed that even the most "savage" of Indians might become educated and law abiding citizens.

Pratt's efforts resulted in the founding of the Carlisle Indian Industrial School at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, in 1879. As head of the school, Pratt stressed both academic and industrial education. He believed that if the Indian was to claim his rightful place as an American citizen, he must renounce his tribal way of life, abandon the reservation, and seek education and employment among the "best classes" of Americans.

During his superintendency of the Carlisle School, Pratt became an outspoken opponent of tribal segregation on reservations. He believed that this system as administered and encouraged by the Indian Bureau was hindering the education and civilization of the Indian and creating helpless wards of the state. These views inevitably led to conflicts with the Indian Bureau and the government officials who supported the reservation system. Long standing animosities came to a head in May of 1904 when Pratt strongly denounced the Indian Bureau and the reservation system as a hindrance to the civilization and assimilation of the Indian. This controversy, coupled with earlier disputes with the government over civil service reform, led to Pratt's forced retirement as superintendent of the Carlisle School in 1904. This did not, however, end Pratt's long career as a crusader for Indian causes. A tireless speaker and letter writer, he waged a vigorous campaign for the fair and humane treatment of the American Indian until his death in 1924.

Description of the Papers

The papers of Richard Henry Pratt provide valuable information on the still controversial question of the proper treatment of the American Indian. The papers span Pratt's long career as an Army officer, educator, and crusader for Indian causes.

The papers are divided into six series. Series I, General Correspondence and Official Papers \(p. 7\) consists of official Army papers as well as Pratt's incoming and outgoing letters. Pratt made copies of most of his letters. These copies, either carbons, drafts, or volumes of letterpress impressions, are filed chronologically as Outgoing Letters and provide a very complete record of his letter writing. Incoming Letters are arranged alphabetically by author.

The main subject of Pratt's correspondence until 1904 was the founding and administration of the Carlisle Indian Industrial School. His correspondence reveals Pratt's efforts to gain support for the school from Indians, the government, and private donors as well as the day to day difficulties in the actual management of the school. In addition, there is correspondence with former Indian students like Howard E. Gansworth, Dr. Carlos Montezuma, and Chauncey Yellow Robe on the position and problems of Indians in America.

Pratt corresponded with many prominent Americans interested in the plight of the Indian. These correspondents include: Lyman Abbott (10 items), Samuel C. Armstrong (101 items), Spencer F. Baird (21 items), Rudolph Blankenburg (14 items), James W. Champney (18 items), Clara B. Colby (2 items), Henry L. Dawes (31 items), W. Maslin Frysinger (22 items), Henry G. Ganns (39 items), Howard E. Gansworth (22 items), Franklin K. Lane (18 items), John D. Miles (145 items), Carlos Montezuma (122 items), Knute Nelson (34 items), Arthur C. Parker (45 items), Carl Schurz (12 items), and Cato Sells (13 items).

Official Papers contains material on Pratt's early Army career and his experiences with Indian prisoners at St. Augustine. This section contains reports, orders, official correspondence and communications. Information about Pratt's early experiments with Indian education and on the establishment of the Carlisle School may also be found here.

Series II, Family Correspondence \(p. 30\), contains Pratt's letters to and from members of his family. Also included in this series is the correspondence of his daughter, Nana Pratt Hawkins; his wife, Anna Laura Pratt; his son, Mason Delano Pratt; his grandson, R. H. Pratt, II; his granddaughter, Sarah Pratt; his son-in-law, Guy LeRoy Stevick; and his daughter, Marion Pratt Stevick. Of special interest is Pratt's correspondence with his wife about his experiences with Indians while serving in the Army and about the founding of the Carlisle School. The correspondence of Pratt's children details their futile efforts to have Pratt's autobiographical work published after his death. Correspondence between Pratt's children and Elaine Goodale Eastman, author of Pratt: The Red Man's Moses, reveal the preparation of and reaction to this biography.

The correspondence of Mason D. Pratt offers some insight into Pratt's experiences at St. Augustine, Florida. Details about Pratt's role in the Sioux Commission of 1888 are found in the correspondence of his son-in-law, Guy LeRoy Stevick.

The third series, Addresses, Diaries, Writings, and Notes \(p. 37\), contains copies of articles and addresses by Pratt which provide a good source for Pratt's beliefs on Indian education and civilization. In addition, there are several versions of Pratt's autobiographical work and also four diaries which recount Pratt's activities during the Civil War.

Series IV, Photographs and Drawings \(p. 41\), contains numerous photographs of the facilities and students of the Carlisle Indian Industrial School. There are also a large number of photographs of Pratt. Other subjects include the Indian prisoners of St. Augustine and Fort Marion, their place of confinement. Of special interest are the "before and after" pictures of many Indians that contrast their "savage" appearance upon arrival at the Carlisle School with the "civilized" appearance after receiving the benefits of an education. There are negatives for many of the photographs in this series. Contact prints have been made for the glass plate negatives, and the originals have been placed in Restricted Fragile, where they may be consulted only with the approval of the appropriate curator.

This series also includes many drawings made by Indians at St. Augustine and Carlisle. These drawings are of interest not only because of their artistic merit, but because of what they reveal about the Indian's way of life and his perception of the changing world. A series of drawings by a Kiowa Indian, Etahdleuh Doanmoe, relate in pictorial form his journey from the plains to imprisonment in St. Augustine and his experiences in captivity.

Series V, Clippings, Scrapbooks, and Miscellaneous Publications \(p. 44\), contains a large amount of newspaper clippings, both loose and in scrapbooks, that chronicle Pratt's activities from the St. Augustine days to the end of his career. Two scrapbooks in this series are devoted to press reactions to the Sioux Commission of 1888 of which Pratt was a member.

The sixth series, Special Files \(p. 46\), contains assorted biographical materials about Pratt and miscellaneous materials on the Carlisle Indian Industrial School.

		Series I. General Correspondence and Official Papers 74 boxes	1867-1924
		Series I, General Correspondence and Official Papers is divided into four subseries. Incoming Letters received by Pratt are arranged alphabetically by author and chronologically within each folder. A folder of unidentified material is placed at the end of this section. Outgoing Letters written by Pratt are arranged chronologically. Pratt's letters from the years 1872 to 1904 are bound in 60 volumes of letterpress copies. Additional unbound letters from these years, as well as the letters from 1904 until Pratt's death in 1924, are arranged chronologically in folders. Letters of Others, found with Pratt's or Pratt's family's correspondence, but which are not to or from Pratt are arranged alphabetically by author. Official Papers is a file of material relating to Pratt's early Army career, his command of Indian prisoners in Florida, the beginnings of the Carlisle Indian Industrial School, and other Army related matters. Reports, orders, official correspondence and communications are contained in this section. This file contains material both to and from Pratt as well as communications of others. The material in this file is arranged chronologically. Note: Individuals represented in Official Papers may also be represented in other subseries of General Correspondence.

Series II. Family Correspondence

Box	Folder	Description	Date(s)
		Series II. Family Correspondence 4 boxes	1862-1956
		Series II, Family Correspondence , is grouped into eight subseries, one for each of the following members of the Pratt Family: Nana Pratt Hawkins (daughter), Anna Laura Pratt (wife), Mason Delano Pratt (son), Richard Henry Pratt, R. H. Pratt, II (grandson), Sarah Pratt (granddaughter), Guy LeRoy Stevick (son-in-law), Marion Pratt Stevick (daughter). Within each subseries the correspondence is arranged alphabetically by the name of the author. Letters written by the eight family members are filed under the name of the recipient. All letters written by the family members are filed in their respective subseries, except those addressed to General Pratt. All letters written to Pratt are filed in the R. H. Pratt section under the name of the author.

Series III. Addresses, Diaries, Writings, and Notes

Box	Folder	Description	Date(s)
		Series III. Addresses, Diaries, Writings, and Notes 4 boxes	1862-1953
		This series contains addresses, articles, and notes written by Pratt. In addition there is a diary kept by Pratt during the Civil War and several versions of an autobiographical work that Pratt wrote in his later years. Two drafts of this manuscript are filed under Pratt's working title, The Indian No Problem . Fragments of a later version with a foreword and conclusion written by Pratt's widow are filed under her title, Indian Trails . A revised and edited version of Pratt's manuscript was published in 1964 under the title Battlefield and Classroom . A galley proof of this manuscript is also included in this series. Addresses given by Pratt are arranged in chronological order. Title or subject is noted along with place of delivery if known. Copies of nine articles by Pratt are also included in this series. Not all of these reminiscences or statements were written for publication. Finally, there are several folders of miscellaneous notes and writings by members of Pratt's family.

Series IV. Photographs and Drawings

Box	Folder	Description	Date(s)
		Series IV. Photographs and Drawings 4 boxes	1875-1904
		Complete and exact identification of individuals, buildings and scenes in the photographs in this series was not possible. The photographs have therefore been grouped together in a general subject arrangement. There are cut film negatives for many of the photographs in this series. These negatives are also arranged by subject and are filed after the photographs. Contact prints have been made for the glass plate negatives, and the originals have been placed in Restricted Fragile , where they may be consulted only with the approval of the appropriate curator. This series also contains several sketchbooks of drawings made by Indian prisoners at St. Augustine, Florida, and Indian students at Carlisle, Pennsylvania.

PDF | In this paper, I consider the parallels between the liberal philosophy of Richard Henry Pratt (1840-1924), founder of the Carlisle Indian School | Find, read and cite all the research you need on ResearchGate. I then argue that Pratt's project has strong parallel commitments and that those commitments led, not to the reduction of suffering and humiliation among American Indians, but rather their increase. Finally, I return to Rorty's project and consider whether Rorty can avoid the worst of Pratt's program by affirming a particular brand of ethnocentrism. Pragmatism Today Vol. 7, Issue 2, 2016. The papers largely relate to Pratt's work with and theories on the education of American Indians and his involvement with the Carlisle Indian School. Included is material relating to the controversies surrounding his work and much relating to Indians and Indian life in general. It was on the frontier that Pratt came in contact with the American Indian and began developing the theories that were to guide him throughout his life. Photograph from the Richard Henry Pratt Papers, Yale University. Circa 1882. Pratt served in the Indiana Volunteer infantry and cavalry during the Civil War, and in 1867 he was assigned as an officer to the Tenth United States Cavalry, a regiment of black soldiers. He took part in several Indian Wars, and in 1875 he was ordered to supervise the incarceration of 72 Indian prisoners at Fort Marion near St. Augustine. Around this period of his life, he began experimenting and developing his theories of education that he would later introduce at the boarding school for Indian youth in Carlisle, Pa Richard Henry Pratt, the creator of the Carlisle Indian Industrial School that became the inspiration and model for many similar institutions across the nation, intended to save a people from complete destruction, yet the unforeseen consequences of his Continue Reading. The "rightness" of Native American boarding school. In the 1870s, the U.S. government enacted a policy of assimilation of Native Americans, to Americanize them. Their goal was to turn them into white men. Schools were an important part of facilitating their goal. In 1879, Richard Henry Pratt founded the Carlisle Indian School. It was the first school in which Native American children were culturally exposed to American ideology. The idea for the boarding school first came through treatment of Cheyenne warriors.
